Discriminant analysis is a classification method. It assumes that different classes generate data based on different Gaussian distributions. To train (create) a classifier, the fitting function estimates the parameters of a Gaussian distribution for each class (see Creating Discriminant Analysis Model).

Fisher's Linear Discriminant, in essence, is a technique for dimensionality reduction, not a discriminant. For binary classification, we can find an optimal threshold t and classify the data accordingly. For multiclass data, we can (1) model a class conditional distribution using a Gaussian.
