Hurwitz's writing is crisp and economical, and he steers clear of hackneyed phrases and one-dimensional characters—Nate's and Pavlo's back stories are well-crafted, although the ghost of Nate's dead friend Charles seems inspired by a James Lee Burke novel. A fine thriller that succeeds on every level.

The Survivor by Hurwitz, Gregg - Amazon.ae

Gregg Hurwitz's THE SURVIVOR sends me into manic-depressive swings, the turbo-charged plot producing a high so exhilarating from the very first page that meth might as well be Vallium, and writing--oh, that kid's prose--that makes me weep with the knowledge that I couldn't never be that good, that lyrical, in my dreams.

Hurwitz grew up in the San Francisco Bay Area and graduated from Bellarmine College Preparatory in San Jose, California. While completing a bachelor of arts degree from Harvard University (1995) and a master's from Trinity College, Oxford in Shakespearean tragedy (1996), he wrote his first novel. At Harvard, he was a student of psychologist Jordan Peterson who influenced his writing.

Gregg Hurwitz - Wikipedia

This is the second Gregg Hurwitz publication I have read in quick succession after buying Orphan X from Tesco and really enjoying it - and The Survivor did not disappoint. An equally good read, gripping story with an unlikely but believable hero, well-written and fast-paced.

The Survivor: Hurwitz, Gregg: Amazon.com.au: Books

Gregg Hurwitz creates 3-dimensional characters, keeps the good one at risk, throws in enough plot twists to keep you guessing and wraps it up in great satisfaction, though a little bittersweet. Well worth the credit. Our hero, Nate Overbay, is certainly flawed. His life was robbed of its goodness by PTSD and then he was diagnosed with ALS.
